You Are Not Alone.

Today, almost a million residents enjoy the benefits of assisted living and other resident-centered care options. These residents chose senior living because—like you—they want to remain active and engaged. They value the lifestyle, full of choice, dignity, independence, and quality of life, that senior living residents live every day.

With 31,000 licensed assisted living communities across the country, you have a variety of options from which to choose: Where the community is located; the types of care and residential services offered; the type of property; the size of an apartment; the range of rents; and, most important, the “feel” you experience when you tour the community.

These differences are important. However, more important is what they all have in common.

Assisted living was founded on a resident-centered philosophy to enable choice, preserve dignity, encourage independence, and promote quality of life. Every day in assisted living communities, the staff lives and breathes this philosophy. It is reflected in the care and services they offer every day to each resident.

This resource is a starting point. Tour assisted living communities early, before they are needed and tour as many as possible. There are many resources available today to help you find the option that is right for you or your loved one.

Who Benefits from Assisted Living Communities?

Assisted living communities serve seniors who require assistance with everyday activities such as meal preparation, medication management, transportation and personal care (dressing, bathing, etc). They are also appropriate for seniors who require specialized assistance for Alzheimer's Disease or related dementia. Seniors who can no longer live alone or be cared for by an aging spouse or a family member frequently turn to assisted living communities.

What are Assisted Living Communities?

Assisted living communities offer supportive amenities, services, and care in a residential setting with the comforts of home. Assisted living has staff available in the community 24/7 to assist with care, safety, and support. When you've seen one assisted living community, you've seen just one. They come in all different shapes and sizes, and offer a variety of features, amenities, and prices.

Typical Costs & Flexible Financial Options

Prices vary with the community, apartment size, and types of services and level of care needed by residents. Typically, communities charge a monthly rent that includes all the residential services and amenities. And, they will charge a monthly care fee based on the level of care a resident requires each day. Some communities may bundle rent and care fees together.

Many assisted living communities charge market rates and are private pay as Medicare does not cover the usual services offered in assisted living. Some communities do participate in Medicaid waiver programs.

Assisted living communities offer the benefits of a social and residential model of care where privacy is still preserved.

What Amenities and Services are Available?

The most common amenities and services offered in assisted living communities are:

- Dining services, usually including breakfast, lunch, dinner, and snacks
- Housekeeping
- Transportation
- Personal laundry services
- Wellness and fitness programs
- Social and recreational activities

What Types of Care are Offered

Assistance with personal care such as dressing, bathing and grooming is very common in assisted living, as are services to assist with continence, medications, memory loss and mobility.

Also, residents may be able to bring in outside services specialized in physical therapy, hospice, and other services.

Options many residents and their families have used to pay for assisted living include:

- Income from social security and other pensions
- The sale of the family home and other investments
- Personal retirement savings
- Assistance from family
- Long-term care insurance
- The VA Aid and Attendance Program
- The settlement of a life insurance policy that is no longer needed
- Medicaid may be available on a limited basis to income-eligible seniors
- Choosing to share your apartment with a roommate

Who Oversees Quality and Standards of Assisted Living?

Assisted living is regulated in all 50 states. The license should be easily available for you to see in the community. All state laws also provide for a Resident Bill of Rights, which is posted.

Assisted living communities are inspected by the state regulatory agency. You may request a copy of the most recent survey report from the community. Assisted living communities must also comply with local building codes, fire safety regulations, and other requirements.

Additionally, many operators of professionally managed assisted living communities for seniors have company quality review programs in place to review and continually improve services, as well as resident and family councils to address questions in a timely manner.

How Can I Find An Assisted Living Community?

There are numerous resources online and in your community to help you research senior care options more thoroughly and locate options.

- National Eldercare Locator by the U.S. Administration on Aging | (800) 677-1116
- Local Area Agency/Council on Aging | www.n4a.org
- The ALFA Senior Living Community Directory powered by Caring.com offers a feature-rich web resource to seniors and their families who want to locate senior living options, including assisted living, in their area. Visit www.alfa.org/seniorliving.

Community Review Checklist

The best advice is to locate and visit assisted living communities before a crisis. Meeting the staff, residents and often family members is one of the best ways to learn about the community. Every assisted living community is unique, but there are common questions to ask yourself and the community before, during, and after a visit.

The checklist that follows will help you ask these questions and make an assessment for yourself and/or a loved one.

Environment

- : As you arrive at the community, do you like its location and outward appearance?
- : As you enter the lobby and tour the community, is the décor attractive and homelike?
- : Do you receive a warm greeting from staff welcoming you to the community?
- : Does the executive director call residents by name and interact warmly with them as you tour the community?
- : Do residents socialize with each other and appear happy and comfortable?
- : Are you able to talk with residents about how they like the community and staff?
- : Do the residents seem to be appropriate housemates for you or your loved one?
- : Are staff members appropriately dressed, personable, and outgoing?
- : Do the staff members treat each other in a professional manner?
- : Are the staff members that you pass during your tour friendly to you?
- : Are visits with the resident welcome at any time?

Community Review Checklist
